

(CIRCA JAN 75 PMD)
myr -

POL35/81(1)

Tel. No. - 4245
2000

Directors: B. DUDDY
M. DUDDY
B. MOUNT

Duddy's fashion house

19 STRAND RD. LONDONDERRY

LEADERS IN THE WORLD OF FASHION!

The leader ship of the Rep. Move. old and a lot sus. of off. M.I.T. Act. in J.B. on 28 Jan 75 and N.I. 10 Feb. 75. This foll. on for our unit. sus. of 22 Dec. 74. This constitutes By Tues. 1 April 100 day of off. piece on the part of our force.

During the per the. L.C. of Rep. M. Ho exactly Train things over Reps to pave the way toward a per. and living people in Ire. and a per M. end to this age old conflict. We must have sus that our out effort have not met with success.
we feel the H. of Reps. - the gl. are too close to the d. to d. prob. of Adm. N.I.
to fully app. the trust - import of the past 100 days.

It is our compelling belief that the I.P.R.B.
will be solved only by I.M. freed for B.
don't on political constraints. We have accep that the Irish prob can't be solved "at a stroke" But the prob to date fall far short of what we consider the Min. Necess. to sat. our Mov. and People.

May we take this opp. Mr. P.M. to put out to you that the Lead has ref^d for all Pub. Not alone in the Press But right down to our own Vol. who have most heartily accept this very doubtful point.
F^{or} face of the lack of Real Move M^{ent}.
the, continuing arrest and imprison. of our Members both in N.I and Eng. the almost total lack of real response from the M. Gen.
on the gr. the P^{ro}. dropped to a Real^{ly} of Pol. Pris and the des^{er} drift towards the restruct^{ing} of Brit^{ish} Rule in N.I. can we honestly be expected to mai^{ntain} our present p^{os}ition.

We trust you Mr. P.M. will take the
opp. of this Historic East time to make a truly positive init^{iative}, which will break
the necessary of the continuing re occu^{pan} of Host. Between our people and secure a H^{igh} and per. end to such Host.

The Leadership of the Republican Movement ordered a total suspension of offensive military action in Britain on 28th January and in Northern Ireland on 10th February, 1975. This followed on from our unilateral suspension of 22nd December, 1974. This constitutes, by Tuesday 1st April, one hundred days of effective peace on the part of our forces.

During this period, the Leadership of the Republican Movement has earnestly tried through our representatives to pave the way towards a permanent and lasting peace in Ireland and a permanent end to this age-old conflict. We must honestly say that our efforts have not met with success.

We feel that Her Majesty's Representatives on the ground are too close to the day to day problems of administering Northern Ireland to fully appreciate the historic importance of the last 100 days.

It is our compelling belief that the Irish problem will be solved only by Irishmen, freed from British direction and political constraints. We have accepted that the Irish problem cannot be solved "at a stroke", but the progress to date falls far short of what we consider the minimum necessary to satisfy our Movement and people.

May we take this opportunity, Mr. Prime Minister, to point out to you that the Leadership has refrained from all publicity, not alone in the press but right down to our own volunteers, who have most honourably accepted this very doubtful position.

In face of the lack of real movement, the continual arresting and imprisonment of our members, both in Northern Ireland and in England, the almost total lack of real response from Her Majesty's forces on the ground, the punitive "dribble" technique of releases of political prisoners and the discernible drift towards the restructuring of British rule in Northern Ireland, can we honestly be expected to maintain our present position?

We trust you, Mr. Prime Minister, will take the opportunity of this historic Easter time to make a truly positive initiative which will break the necessity for the continuing re-occurrence of hostilities between our peoples and secure an honourable and permanent end to such hostilities.

29/3/75

POL 35/81(3)

Subject Saturday , March 29th to the Rt. Hon. H. Wilson.

The Leadership of the Republican Movement ordered a total suspension of offensive military action in Britain on the 28th of January , 1975³, and in Northern Ireland on the 10th February, 1975. This followed on from our unilateral suspension of hostilities on the 22nd December, 1974. This constitutes by Tuesday, April 1st one hundred days of effective peace on the part of our forces.

During this period the representatives of the Republican Movement have earnestly tried with your representatives to pave the way towards a permanent and lasting peace in Ireland, and a permanent end to this age-old conflict. We must honestly say that our efforts have not met with success. We feel that Her Majesty's representatives on the ground are too close to the day-to-day problems of administering Northern Ireland to fully appreciate the historic importance of the past one-hundred days.

It is our compelling belief , that our Irish problem will be solved only by Irish men , freed from British direction and political constraints. We have accepted that the Irish problem cannot be solved , " at a stroke", but the progress to date falls far short of what we consider the minimum necessary to satisfy our Movement and our people.

May we take this opportunity , Mr. Prime Minister, that the Leadership of the Republican Movement has refrained from all publicity , not alone in the press but right down to our own volunteers who have most honourably accepted this very doubtful position.

In face of the lack of real movement, the continuing arrest and imprisonment of our members , both in Northern Ireland and England, the almost total lack of real response from Her Majesty's Forces on the ground , the punitive "dribble technique" of releasing political prisoners and the discernible drift towards the restructuring of British Rule in Northern Ireland can we honestly be expected to maintain our present position ?

We trust that you, Mr. Prime Minister, will take the opportunity of this historic Easter time to make a truly positive initiative which will break the necessity of the continuing re-occurrence of hostilities between our peoples and secure an honourable and permanent end such hostilities.

29/3/75.

Saturday , March 29th to the Rt. Hon. H. Wilson.

POL 35/81(4)

The Leadership of the Republican Movement ordered a total suspension of offensive military action in Britain on the 28th of January , 1975, and in Northern Ireland on the 10th February, 1975. This followed on from our unilateral suspension of hostilities on the 22nd December, 1974. This constitutes by Tuesday, April 1st one hundred days of effective peace on the part of our forces.

During this period the representatives of the Republican Movement have earnestly tried with your representatives to pave the way towards a permanent and lasting peace in Ireland, and a permanent end to this age-old conflict. We must honestly say that our efforts have not met with success. We feel that Her Majesty's representatives on the ground are too close to the day-to-day problems of administering Northern Ireland to fully appreciate the historic importance of the past one-hundred days.

It is our compelling belief , that our Irish problem will be solved only by Irish men , freed from British direction and political constraints. We have accepted that the Irish problem cannot be solved , " at a stroke", but the progress to date falls far short of what we consider the minimum necessary to satisfy our Movement and our people.

May we take this opportunity , Mr. Prime Minister, that the Leadership of the Republican Movement has refrained from all publicity , not alone in the press but right down to our own volunteers who have most honourably accepted this very doubtful position.

In face of the lack of real movement, the continuing arrest and imprisonment of our members , both in Northern Ireland and England, the almost total lack of real response from Her Majesty's Forces on the ground , the punitive "dribble technique" of releasing political prisoners and the discernible drift towards the restructuring of British Rule in Northern Ireland can we honestly be expected to maintain our present position ?

We trust that you, Mr. Prime Minister, will take the opportunity of this historic Easter time to make a truly positive initiative which will break the necessity of the continuing re-occurrence of hostilities between our peoples and secure an honourable and permanent end such hostilities.

The Leadership of the Republican Movement ordered a total suspension of offensive military action in Britain on 28th January and in Northern Ireland on 10th February, 1975. This followed on from our unilateral suspension of 22nd December, 1974. This constitutes, by Tuesday 1st April, one hundred days of effective peace on the part of our forces.

During this period, the Leadership of the Republican Movement has earnestly tried through our representatives to pave the way towards a permanent and lasting peace in Ireland and a permanent end to this age-old conflict. We must honestly say that our efforts have not met with success.

We feel that Her Majesty's Representatives on the ground are too close to the day to day problems of administering Northern Ireland to fully appreciate the historic importance of the last 100 days.

It is our compelling belief that the Irish problem will be solved only by Irishmen, freed from British direction and political constraints. We have accepted that the Irish problem cannot be solved "at a stroke", but the progress to date falls far short of what we consider the minimum necessary to satisfy our Movement and people.

May we take this opportunity, Mr. Prime Minister, to point out to you that the Leadership has refrained from all publicity, not alone in the press but right down to our own volunteers, who have most honourably accepted this very doubtful position.

In face of the lack of real movement, the continual arresting and imprisonment of our members, both in Northern Ireland and in England, the almost total lack of real response from Her Majesty's forces on the ground, the punitive "dribble" technique of releases of political prisoners and the discernible drift towards the restructuring of British rule in Northern Ireland, can we honestly be expected to maintain our present position?

We trust you, Mr. Prime Minister, will take the opportunity of this historic Easter time to make a truly positive initiative which will break the necessity for the continuing re-occurrence of hostilities between our peoples and secure an honourable and permanent end to such hostilities.

(6 copies in all)
PMD

The Leadership of the Republican Movement ordered a total suspension of offensive military action in Britain on 28th January and in Northern Ireland on 10th February, 1975. This followed on from our unilateral suspension of 22nd December, 1974. This constitutes, by Tuesday 1st April, one hundred days of effective peace on the part of our forces.

During this period, the Leadership of the Republican Movement has earnestly tried through our representatives to pave the way towards a permanent and lasting peace in Ireland and a permanent end to this age-old conflict. We must honestly say that our efforts have not met with success.

We feel that Her Majesty's Representatives on the ground are too close to the day to day problems of administering Northern Ireland to fully appreciate the historic importance of the last 100 days.

It is our compelling belief that the Irish problem will be solved only by Irishmen, freed from British direction and political constraints. We have accepted that the Irish problem cannot be solved "at a stroke", but the progress to date falls far short of what we consider the minimum necessary to satisfy our Movement and people.

May we take this opportunity, Mr. Prime Minister, to point out to you that the Leadership has refrained from all publicity, not alone in the press but right down to our own volunteers, who have most honourably accepted this very doubtful position.

In face of the lack of real movement, the continual arresting and imprisonment of our members, both in Northern Ireland and in England, the almost total lack of real response from Her Majesty's forces on the ground, the punitive "dribble" technique of releases of political prisoners and the discernible drift towards the restructuring of British rule in Northern Ireland, can we honestly be expected to maintain our present position?

We trust you, Mr. Prime Minister, will take the opportunity of this historic Easter time to make a truly positive initiative which will break the necessity for the continuing re-occurrence of hostilities between our peoples and secure an honourable and permanent end to such hostilities.

The Leadership of the Republican Movement ordered a total suspension of offensive military action in Britain on 28th January and in Northern Ireland on 10th February, 1975. This followed on from our unilateral suspension of 22nd December, 1974. This constitutes, by Tuesday 1st April, one hundred days of effective peace on the part of our forces.

During this period, the Leadership of the Republican Movement has earnestly tried through our representatives to pave the way towards a permanent and lasting peace in Ireland and a permanent end to this age-old conflict. We must honestly say that our efforts have not met with success.

We feel that Her Majesty's Representatives on the ground are too close to the day to day problems of administering Northern Ireland to fully appreciate the historic importance of the last 100 days.

It is our compelling belief that the Irish problem will be solved only by Irishmen, freed from British direction and political constraints. We have accepted that the Irish problem cannot be solved "at a stroke", but the progress to date falls far short of what we consider the minimum necessary to satisfy our Movement and people.

May we take this opportunity, Mr. Prime Minister, to point out to you that the Leadership has refrained from all publicity, not alone in the press but right down to our own volunteers, who have most honourably accepted this very doubtful position.

In face of the lack of real movement, the continual arresting and imprisonment of our members, both in Northern Ireland and in England, the almost total lack of real response from Her Majesty's forces on the ground, the punitive "dribble" technique of releases of political prisoners and the discernible drift towards the restructuring of British rule in Northern Ireland, can we honestly be expected to maintain our present position?

We trust you, Mr. Prime Minister, will take the opportunity of this historic Easter time to make a truly positive initiative which will break the necessity for the continuing re-occurrence of hostilities between our peoples and secure an honourable and permanent end to such hostilities.

This can be dated as 29/3/75.
It is a handwritten (1st draft?) of a comm. to H. Wilson.

The type versions (6 in all) are behind.
" " " are also in the Original
+ Copy versions of the P.A.C. minutes.